

David Wing, MBA, CPA is a risk taker, change agent, and social entrepreneur. He has spent over 30 years in the airline industry and, most recently, was the Chief Accounting Officer for United Airlines in Chicago. In 2010, Mr. Wing took a major career risk by resigning his position to enter the world of non-profit social entrepreneurship. In 2011, he was accepted as a Fellow in the 2012 Advanced Leadership Initiative at Harvard University. This one-year program was designed to assist highly experienced leaders make the shift to social entrepreneurship to drive social improvements in poverty, environment, public health and education. Mr. Wing is now the founder of Project Coral Rescue, a non-profit social enterprise designed to preserve and restore the U.S. coral reefs. More information about David's project can be found at projectcoralrescue.org.
